HEAVY FREIGHT TRAFFIC ON ALL THE RAILROADS

Probably the heaviest freight of the season was that loaded over the Pennsylvania railroad last week. The amount of the western crops shipped east and this was responsible for the big increase in the freight rate. Just how long the boom will last, no one knows, but they are not too sure that it will be a permanent one.

There are a lot of chances to make money last week for the first time this season. Look at the crops shipped east. The regular crops were shipped in the past.

Thousands of bushels of wheat are being shipped east. A large number of the crops are in the hands of the farmers and other places being sent to the east.

to shape to handle the heavy traffic that is expected while the harvest season continues.

May Ask Rehearing.

There has been some talk in railway circles for the past two weeks that the managers of the eastern railroads in official classification territory may ask the interstate commerce commission to reopen the freight rate case in which the commission handed down an adverse opinion on August 1. In its decision, the commission granted some relief to the carriers west of Baltimore and Pittsburgh, but denied the application of the carriers operating east of those points. Railroad men contend that conditions have changed materially since that time, and that the commission need have no qualms in reversing itself. The decrease in shipping has materially affected the export and import of the carriers and the carriers are lagging behind.

About two weeks ago the suggestion was made that the railroads should ask congress for relief in the form of some legislation which would enable the carriers to advance rates.

New Type of Caboose.

Within the next week, the first all-steel caboose car to be constructed for the Pennsylvania railroad will be turned out of the shops in Altoona, Pa., and will be put into test trials in the Pittsburgh division for a series of experiments. The caboose is of the type known as N-5 class and will represent the safety-first idea carried out by the Pennsylvania in the construction of its equipment.

Experiments with the new design of caboose will be carried out over the division and in the meantime for the benefit of officials. A feature of the caboose is the two trucks and the greater length by two feet than the ordinary wood caboose. Ample room is provided for the train crew.

day, with black vestments and white cravats. True to the traditions of the sex, the women are busy arranging their veils in order that they shall appear to the best advantage when they enter the audience chamber. At this time remains, the footmen here and there urge the diletto-spectator-hurry.

"The chamber itself is of enormous proportions and is decorated in a manner befitting the use to which it is devoted. It is hung in figured red silk, and rich paintings are on the walls. At the end of the room, nearest the entrance is the papal throne, set on a low platform, but the pope only occupies it at private audiences.

"Quickly the seats around the stage are filled, and late comers manage to squeeze into corners. Perhaps 150 persons are in the room when a group of nuns appears, and they find places in the space between the throne and the doorway.

"By the time the seats are filled there are some furtive whisperings, which cease abruptly when the footmen appear at the entrance. One of them raises his hand, and every one rises. Then enter three cardinals in their scarlet robes, and after them comes the holy father. He wears a white cassock with a silver grille, and on his head is a skullcap of the same material as the cassock.

"Accompanying the pontiff and the cardinals are several officers of the papal guards in military uniforms of dark blue. Remarkably handsome men they are.

Nuns First to Be Greeted.

"First to receive the holy father's greetings are the nuns, who have come to present a memorial or petition. They kneel, and the pope offers to each his hand, on the third finger of which is the ring of St. Peter—a huge square emerald surrounded by diamonds. After all the nuns have kissed the ring they rise, and for several minutes the spokeswoman and the holy father carry on a conversation. The memorial is received and given to one of the cardinals, and the pope begins a circuit of the room.

"As he advances one of the footmen motions to the visitors nearest him and ten or fifteen kneel and salute the ring as it is presented to each in turn. Some of the visitors are on both knees, others on but one.

"All the visitors kneel, so they rise ten or fifteen at a time, until the holy father having completed the tour of the room, he pauses near the door to bestow his blessing, when every one kneels again. In clear, distinct tones the spokesman asks the blessing of God on all present and on all those who have asked the visitors to invoke a blessing. Then, with uplifted hands, he pronounces the benediction in Latin and, followed by the members of his suit, leaves the room.

Thirteen No Hoodoo to Him.

Police-Sergeant John Figg, in acknowledging a presentation from his comrades to the Dover (Del.) police force on his retirement, denied that misfortune attended the number 13. He said he was one of a family of 13; he started work at thirteen; was 13 years in his first employment; joined the Dover police on April 13, when he was twelve-thirteen years old; and his family numbered 13.

Height Breathing.

No one can breathe at a greater height than seven miles.

Possible of Application.

An old woman was walking through a forest when he saw a large bear approaching him. Realizing his predicament, he exclaimed: "Oh Lord, be with me!" Still the bear came on, when the man again prayed: "Oh Lord, be on my side." Seeing the bear continue to approach, the woodsman, whipping out his knife, exclaimed: "Oh Lord, if you won't be on my side, just declare neutrality, and I'll show you the gold-dardest bear fight you ever saw in your life."

How Indians Sleep Warm.

The Indian, according to a writer about camp life, resorts to two methods to keep warm while asleep. If it is not unduly cold, he lights a rather large fire and warms the earth, then rakes away the coals, lies down and pulls his blanket over him. In colder weather, besides this, he heats a big boulder, covers it lightly with earth, and curls himself around it. He never wraps himself in the blanket, but uses it exclusively as a covering.

Put It on the Other Fellow.

"We should so live," remarked the man on the car, "that the other fellow will be to blame if anything goes wrong."

AN AUDIENCE AT THE VATICAN

New Pope Pius X. Received Pilgrims in Rome.

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO DRESS

Black For Both Men and Women, Men Appearing in Evening Dress and Women Without Gloves—Entrance of the Holy Father Impressive—Kissing the Ring of St. Peter.

The New York Post publishes the following interesting account of an audience with the late Pope Pius X. at the Vatican in Rome:

"The 'permea' (permea) which has been obtained after so much effort in the Vatican, partly printed, partly written. It states that his holiness will be pleased to receive in audience at such and such a day and hour Signor Bianco and four others. At the bottom of the page are instructions as to the dress to be worn. Gentlemen are to appear in black clothing, with white cravats. Ladies are to wear black, with black veils. Monsignori and priests are required to wear the garb usual to their ecclesiastical rank. Significant is the warning that under no circumstances will visitors be allowed to present photographs to his holiness. Inquiry brings the information that the ladies are to arrange the veils as a headpiece and not to cover the face and that they are to appear gloveless.

"The time for the audience having arrived, visitors who come to the Vatican on foot must again pass the barrier of the Swiss guards and once more ascend the long stairway. This time, though, they are directed to cross an immense paved court in which are many carriages that have entered the grounds through a gate at an elevation somewhere in the rear. Across the court and up another magnificent flight of marble steps is the audience chamber, to which scores are now winding their way.

ANTWERP VITAL STRATEGIC POINT

W. Captured Germany Could
Cripple British Commerce.

IS BELGIUM'S BEST DEFENSE

Napoleon Called the City "the Loaded Pistol at the Heart of England"—It is Almost as Important to That Country as One of Her Own Ports at the Mouth of the Thames.

Military men see in the German advance on Antwerp an attempt to seize that port in the interest of the German North sea fleet.

The ships of the main German squadron are believed to be in the mouth of the Elbe, close to the entrance to the Kiel canal. The fortifications of Heligoland and on either side of the Elbe ensure the Elbe anchorage safe from attack. These fortifications are believed to be impregnable to ship attack.

The possession of Antwerp and Ghent would put the Germans in position to direct torpedo boat attacks against the mouth of the Thames and against Sheerness and other east coast of England ports.

The distance from Flushing at the Scheldt mouth is so short that torpedo boats could make forays on English ports, and if undamaged could regain port before daylight.

With the advance of the German army into Belgium and a possibility of attack on Antwerp in view, military men early perceived one of the most urgent reasons for England dispatching a large force to the continent. Antwerp is regarded as of almost as much importance to England as one of her own ports at the Thames mouth.

Menace to Holland.
The taking of Antwerp and the utilization of the Scheldt for effective operations against England may spell trouble with Holland, says the New York Herald, but if Germany can pass her torpedo boats down the Rhine into the Scheldt it may mean that she can find a sea outlet west of the Scheldt, either from Belgium or France. The entire Belgian and north French country is a network of canals, and the extent of the tonnage handled on these inland waterways is hardly understood by those who have not actually traversed them. It is a fact that torpedo boats can pass from the Mediterranean to the English channel without going outside, and torpedo boats are built in the interior of France and transported to the north and south by waterways. All the heavy artillery built at the Creu-sot works in central France is sent forward to the artillery shops of the same company at Havre by water.

To Germany the possession of the north Belgian and north French coast means greater striking power at England. It means bringing forward the numerous torpedo boat destroyers and submarines held in leash in the Elbe and at Wilhelmshaven, and it may mean that after all is said and done it is England that Germany is aiming at even more than France in this great struggle.

Antwerp Hard to Capture.

The defenses of Antwerp, to which city the king of the Belgians removed his capital, are the strongest in Belgium. They were designed as the strategic center of the national defense of the country and are supposed to form an entrenched camp for 100,000 men.

The length of the enceinte is about nine miles. The scheme included detached forts, those which are on the side not defended by foundation being about a mile and a quarter apart and from two to three miles in front of the enceinte. They are powerful works for a garrison of about 1,000 men and are intended for an armament of 120 guns and fifteen mortars.

Although the system of defenses was adopted in 1850, the present fortifications were started in 1878, when it was recognized that the old ones had become useless on account of the increased range of artillery and the more destructive power of explosives. It was then decided to change Antwerp from a fortress to a fortified position by constructing an outer line of forts and batteries at a distance varying from six to nine miles from the enceinte. This second line consists of fifteen forts, large and small.

Antwerp has long been regarded by the English as a port which must remain in friendly hands. Its position opposite the mouth of the Thames is too close to take chances. Napoleon seized this port in 1804 and undertook to construct a great naval depot there. He is said to have declared that he would make of Antwerp "a loaded pistol to hold at the heart of England."

Another Chance for Hubby.
Advertisement in a paper—not in the Billville district: "This is to notify my husband, who got mad and ran away without sayin' so much as a word, that if he returns home and signs a paper to quit his meanness and act sensible, like he ought to have been raised to, which he wasn't, about all that I can think of now will be forgiven, provided, as said before, that he is a changed man an' will quit raisin' Cain an' a-doin' of nothin'—Atlantic Constitution."

Hearing Heart Beats.
If you hear your heart beat in one ear, as many persons do, it is no proof of anything wrong with the heart. It is much more likely to be a local defect such as a chronic catarrh of the middle ear or stiffness and retraction of the drum. This is on the authority of a leading physician of Chicago.

GARDEN TRUCK FOR MARKET

Preparing Fruit and Vegetables is Most Important Operation—Uniformity Most Desired.

The most important operation in preparing fruit and vegetables for market is the grading. The work should be started in the field with the growing of crops. Careful cultivation means fewer culls and less expense for sorting and grading. Uniformity is the principal requirement to be considered in grading and packing.

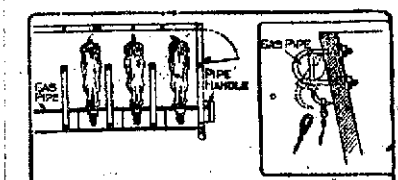

Growers should not attempt to handle and market their crops unless they pack them in uniform packages and grade them so that they will present a uniform quality, and general appearance. Produce put up in good shape will appear to the best advantage at the time of sale. Markets are seldom over supplied with good fruits and vegetables; it is the unevenly ripened, poorly developed, badly selected produce that injures the sale of the better products.

Produce of all kinds should be sorted so that in each package each specimen is as nearly like the others as is practicable. The efficient grader has in mind the appearance of the whole package, and not the individual specimens. This work can seldom be overdone, for the more rigid the grading the greater will be the profits at the time of sale.

UNHITCH ANIMALS IN HURRY

Device Installed in Barn at Pennsylvania Colliery Which Was Means of Saving Many Mules.

When a barn catches fire the matter of saving the horses and mules is a most serious problem. Rapidity of the blaze, the panic of the animals and the confusion make the release difficult, sometimes impossible, says Popular Mechanics. A device has been installed in the barn at a colliery in Pennsylvania which was the means of saving the lives of 43 mules in a recent fire. A wrought-iron gas pipe, 1½-inch in diameter, was passed through all the stalls, from one end of the barn to the other and supported on the front of the stalls. In each stall a seven-eighths-inch rod passes through the pipe, its lower end being bent to a hook with the point resting in a slight depression in the manger. The halter-strap ring is hooked over this. A quarter turn of a handle at either end of the pipe turns the hooks back and the rings drop off, releasing all the animals in the barn simultaneously.

TREAT HARD ALFALFA SEED

Unyielding Coats Prevent Them From Taking Up Water Readily, Delaying Germination.

In testing alfalfa seed for germination, it will be noticed that some seeds will not germinate, although they are healthy in appearance and not decayed at the end of the test. These are termed "hard seeds." They have unusually hard seed coats, which prevent them from taking up water readily. These seeds germinate readily when the seed coats are scratched. In former years it was thought that hard seeds in alfalfa and clover were as much inert matter. It is reasonable, however, to believe that many of the seeds become sufficiently scratched during seedling operations that they will grow at once, while others will grow later. Experimental work is being done along this line and it is hoped that soon the hard seeds in alfalfa will be found nearly as useful as the others. It is found that alfalfa seed from the various states differs greatly as to the percentage of hard seeds.

The Minnesota seed laboratory, in its enforcement of the new seed law, has made a regulation regarding the hard seeds in alfalfa and the clovers as follows: That, in placing the germination test on the label when seed is sold one-half the percentage of hard seed may be added to the percentage of seeds that germinated.

Noxious Discovery.
Another thing that interferes somewhat with a man's ambition to get even more than seventeen miles per gallon is the women folks' scientific discovery that gasoline, poured freely around the roots of the burdock plants along the back fence, will kill 'em deader than a door nail.—Ohio State Journal.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For
Aug. 30, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxii, 15-22.
Memory Verses, 16, 17—Golden Text,
Matt. xxii, 21—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson of questions by Pharisees and Herodians and Sadducees, feigning themselves just men, but seeking to entangle Him in His words and to deliver Him unto the power and authority of the governor, is found in Matthew, Mark and Luke (Matt. xii, 13; Luke xx, 20). His warning to the disciples to beware of the same three classes of people is found in Matt. xvi, 6; Mark viii, 15. The Pharisees were the most religious people of that day, but were more formalists. Everything was outward to obtain praise of men; nothing real before God. The Herodians, judging from Herod, could enjoy a good tale, but preserved the sinful pleasures of this world to things real and eternal. The Sadducees were religious, but had no use for things supernatural, angels or spirits, and did not believe in any resurrection. None of them had any use for Jesus Christ or His doctrine. Although they could not deny His wonderful works, His teaching was to them foolish and impractical and impossible. The light of His pure, holy life was too great a contrast to their selfish sinfulness.

Even Daniel's enemies had to confess that he was faithful and that there was neither error nor fault in him and that it would be impossible to find occasion against him unless in some way concerning the law of his God (Dan. vi, 4, 5).

These enemies of Christ were in a similar difficulty, but they would not come from their purpose. The Pharisees and Herodians unite in a scheme which they think will surely entangle Him and find occasion against Him. They come with flattering words concerning His being a teacher of truth and caring not for what people think or say of Him (verse 16). They proposed a question which it seems to them will bring from Him an amazing reply: "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not?" ("Shall we give, or shall we not give?" (verse 17, Mark xii, 13).

They probably thought that He would advise not to give to Caesar and thus find Him guilty of teaching against Caesar. They did not begin to know Him, nor that He could read their hearts, nor that they were dealing with one who knew what was in man (Jer. xvii, 10; John ii, 25). How scathing His reply, "Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?" How surprising His request, "Show me the tribute money," or as it is in Mark xii, 15, "Bring me a penny that I may see it." When they had brought it and in reply to His question told Him whose image it bore, then He saith unto them, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's" (verse 21). So they could not take hold of His words, marveled at His answer, bled their peace, left Him and went their way (verse 22; Luke xi, 20).

It was true on all occasions, "Never man spoke like this man." He Himself said, "The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself, but the Father that dwelleth in me He doeth the works." He gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should speak (John xiv, 10; xii, 49). If we were as fully yielded to Him as He was to the Father it would be true of us, "It is not we that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you" (Matt. x, 20). He was the image of the invisible God (II Cor. iv, 4; Heb. i, 3; Col. i, 15).

When we become His by redemption we begin to bear His image and should day by day be increasingly conformed to that image, for to that end all things are intended to work (Rom. viii, 28, 29). If we by faith behold His glory it will be so until when we see Him we shall be like Him (II Cor. iii, 18; I John iii, 1, 2). By creation they belonged to God, for He gave them life and breath and all things, but by choice they denied God in their works through professing to know Him (Tit. i, 16). God wants nothing from those who will not accept His mercy in Christ Jesus. He must first forgive us as sinners and give us Himself in Christ and make us His children before we can render Him anything, but when we become His our song should be "ever only for Thee." The words "went their way" (verse 22) remind us of the same in verse 5 and that all who are not with Christ in the way are still going their own way to everlasting destruction.

The same day came the Sadducees with their question about the seven brethren who, one after the other, had the same woman to wife. "If there be a resurrection, then whose wife shall she be of the seven?" (verses 23-28). Thus they thought they had shown the impossibility of a life after this one. Note His reply, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God" (verse 29). What a far-reaching, comprehensive word and in a sense applying to all error for it comes from not knowing the Scriptures. The way was a "to see them" is to know the truth, which makes us free indeed (John viii, 32-36).

The Trey
O' Hearts

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever seen that you will never forget.

The Picture: The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., pronounced THE TREY O' HEARTS the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny You attend the movies—regularly. Instead of an ordinary film, you'll see graphically pictured by the best emotional actors and actresses in America—THE TREY O' HEARTS—a pace maker in pictures. So it won't cost you a nickel more to see it.

Mental Back Somersaults No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of THE TREY O' HEARTS one inch ahead of the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way.

Fall Reel Action in Every Foot The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., who are producing these films tell us that there is more action in every foot of THE TREY O' HEARTS than in a full reel of the ordinary scenario. And they should know. Thousands of scenarios go through their hands every year and they're investing $200,000 in putting THE TREY O' HEARTS on the screen. That's backing judgment. And their success in the moving picture business tells whether or not they know a good thing when they see it.

¶ "THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE" will be run in a liberal installment each day, and "THE TREY O' HEARTS" will appear on every Monday and Wednesday—Three full columns on each of these two days, and will also be run in pictures at the NEW OPERA HOUSE Wednesday Evening's.

ATHLETICS HAVE THE 1914

PENNANT WELL CINCHED

New York, Aug. 29.—The Athletics practically have clinched the American league pennant. The Boston Red Sox have a chance—just, as much of a chance as a man has who chases a jack rabbit. The rabbit may bust a leg, or a couple of legs. The chances are that he won't.

With something like 33 games still to go the Athletics have a tremendous lead over the Sox. To win the Sox would have to grab off about 30 out of the next 33 games, even if the Athletics do no better than break even. But it's beyond the wildest imagination that both these little things should happen at the same time.

The Athletics have been ambling along all the way. They have not exerted themselves to the utmost. What's the use of tiring themselves out? To win the pennant with a lead of ten games will satisfy the Athletics just as much as would a 20-game lead.

In a week or two, when Connie Mack figures it out along his careful, conservative lines, that the Athletics have annexed the batting beyond a question of doubt, he'll proceed about the business of trying out some of his new pitchers. Connie has three youngsters who performed in fine style this year. But Connie must develop at least two more. Wonderful as they are, Bender and Plank cannot go on forever. Some day they must step down and out. And when they do Connie wants to have his pitching staff in such shape that the passing of the veterans will not jar the smoothness of his grand baseball machine.

Bender and Plank have gone along this year in amazing fashion. Plank, in his fourteenth year in the big league, is making a strong bid for the pitching leadership of the league. He has compiled a great record so far, and unless something unfortunate happens before the season is out, he will have a record that will stack up with the best achievements of his earliest years.

Bender hasn't worked with the frequency of yore, but every time he has taken his position on the firing line he has demonstrated that his brain has lost none of its cunning, and his whip none of its power. Bender cannot stand too much work. And he is the greatest "money pitcher" in baseball. Knowing these things, Connie is giving him long rests between games and thus grooming him for action in the World series combats.

The Athletics seem to be "pulling" for the Giants to win. They think they have the measure of the Giants and that if they have to Jackie the New Yorkers it's a fairly safe bet that they'll repeat their triumphs of other years. But if they have to start up against the Braves, Cards, or Cubs, it casts a different aspect on things.

The Athletics know what sort of pitching to expect from the Giants—but they aren't familiar with the twists and starts used by the twirlers of the three other clubs. The Athletics pitchers knew the weaknesses of the Giants' clubbers but they don't know much about the twirlers of the other clubs.

If the Athletics had their way about it, the Giants would win the National League pennant.

SEATON'S CAREER AS TWIRLER NEAR CLOSE

Tom Seaton in action
New York, Aug. 29.—Tom Seaton is out of the game for good for the present season because of the failing of his pitching arm.

The Gentleman.
As a finished product, the gentleman seems to do everything very easily; but that ease like the ease of the habit, can only come by effort. He is socially secure; but whatever his station, he was not born so, for no man ever is socially secure by birth, even if he was born to be a king. The test of a gentleman is the pleasure others take in his society, and not in his wit or his virtue of his learning, but in his ordinary social relations with him. And this pleasure he cannot give merely by being on good terms with himself.

The Earth's Shadow.
The earth has a shadow, but very few ever see it, except in eclipses of the moon, or else few recognize it when they see it. Nevertheless, many of us have noticed it on fine, cloudless evenings in summer shortly before sunset, a rosy pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish gray segment under it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith and even passes it. This is the shadow of the earth.

Wise Precaution.
A certain politician desired a diplomatic appointment, says the Washington Star. A friend, in surprise, said to him: "But you don't even speak the language of the country?" "Well," replied the determined applicant, "a man isn't nearly so likely to make indiscreet remarks, if he has to get a lesson and look up the meaning of every word he utters."

As to Florida.
Many a man who is fooling away his time in the literary field might be useful in a potato field.

GOODYEAR TIRES SOLD AT BEFORE-WAR PRICES

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. announce "No war prices on Goodyear Tires." Mr. F. A. Stebbins, president of the company, thus explains their unique position.

"We advanced Goodyear prices, as others did theirs, when the rubber panic came. Almost to a day crude rubber rose in New York from 55 cents per pound to much over a dollar. And, as most of the world's rubber comes via London or Antwerp we saw no way out for a time.

"The New York supply was too small to consider. European exchange was entirely suspended. Merchant ships had ceased running.

"But we have an almost world-wide organization, and we brought it at once into play. We are the world's largest buyers of high-grade rubber, so we have our own experts in London, Colombo, Singapore and Para.

"We cabled our London people to buy the pick of the rubber there. By acting quickly and paying cash they obtained 1,500,000 pounds of the finest rubber there. They bought before the advance—before the other buyers saw a way to get London exchange or to bring the rubber here.

"That big supply of rubber is now nearly all on the way to the Goodyear factory in Akron. It constitutes the best of the London supply. On the inferior grades remaining, prices have since been rapidly advanced.

"We have since taken other steps to insure us a continuous supply, all of the highest grade rubber. In all the chief sources of rubber supply we have experts on the ground. All is being done that can be done to secure the best rubber, the exchange to pay for it and the ships to bring it here.

"The result is that Goodyear tire prices are now the same as in June. We are using the same grade of rubber and the same amount of it as we always have used in these tires.

"We are running our factory with three shifts of men, twenty-four hours a day. So long as we remain in this fortunate position on rubber, we shall supply tire users at before-war prices to the limit of our capacity."

Worth Knowing.
The laurel was much in favor in olden days, as it meant "love triumphs." The Greek bride wore a wreath of myrtle. A bride of today may choose her own flower if she wishes, stamping it with her individuality. Some girls take the flower allotted to the month, especially if the time happens to be June, with its wealth of roses. Widows usually wear violets, either white or purple, or a combination of both.

Spared Listeners and Himself.
For humor, combined with brevity, it would not be easy to rival the French cleric, who, on the festival of St. James, was called upon to pronounce a panegyric on the saint. "My brethren," he said, "twelve months ago I preached a eulogy on the eminent apostle whose festival you celebrate today. As I doubt not, you were all very attentive to me, and as I have not learned anything new of him, I have nothing to add to what I said at the time."

Smoke and Fire.
There can be no great smoke arise but there must be some fire.—Laf.

HOW PINCHOT LED IN BUILDING UP OUR WATERWAYS

EMINENT PENNSYLVANIAN SAW NECESSITY OF MAKING LAKES TO CULP SEAWAY A PRACTICAL ACCOMPLISHMENT

HIS STATESMANSHIP WON

W. K. Kavanaugh, Pioneer in Constructive Work, Tells of Pinchot's Ability and Energy and How He Labored to Help a Project that Meant Millions to the Farmers and the Merchants; Gives Pike County Man Credit for Big Achievement.

By W. K. KAVANAUGH
President, Lakes-to-the-Sea Deep Waterways Association.

Gifford Pinchot stands preeminent in the foreground of the great work of conservation in all its phases, which work has demanded national attention.

At the time he was Chief Forester of the United States, he saw with prophetic vision the great loss to timber resources, and it was perfectly natural that he should be among the first to realize the great importance and necessity for conservation of the public as well as private domain.

Certain it is that when I first met Mr. Pinchot, about 1906, being introduced to him by my friend, the late Dr. W. J. McGee, I at once saw in him a leader and a friend of my project, and I made up my mind that the organization which I then and still represent as its President, the Lakes-to-the-Sea Deep Waterways Association, had at last found one man with honesty of purpose and who seemed with a comprehensive mind to grasp all the questions of conservation and was without question in favor of the improvement of our national waterways and harbors to the fullest extent.

As accepted today the question of conservation of our natural and national resources has been broadened, and not only includes forests, minerals, lands and water with all its uses, but also the conservation of human rights, of human welfare and of citizenship. These are recognized by the nation as real living issues.

Pinchot Showed the Way.
While visiting the National Capital in 1906 it was suggested by Mr. Pinchot that a petition be prepared to be signed by western business organizations which called upon the President to appoint a Waterways Commission for the purpose of studying all questions relating indirectly or directly thereto. This petition was presented to President Roosevelt by Mr. Pinchot, and led to the appointment of the Inland Waterways Commission, and Mr. Pinchot was promptly made its chairman.

As a member of the Inland Waterways Commission he made a most comprehensive and exhaustive study of all the rivers and harbors of the United States, and was engaged in an inspection trip down the Mississippi from St. Paul to Memphis during a low water stage in October, 1907, when President Roosevelt started on that memorable trip from Keokuk to Memphis, Tennessee. Mr. Pinchot and his party joined the President at Keokuk and the greatest procession of western river steamers commenced their journey down the Mississippi river, for the first time giving the President of the United States an opportunity to study one of the nation's transportation and economic problems. He interested the President.

The objective point was Memphis, Tennessee, at which enterprising city there had gathered together the greatest and largest body of waterway enthusiasts that this country has ever seen, and I might say in passing, that it was through the untiring efforts of Mr. Pinchot that President Roosevelt consented to make the journey down the Father of Waters; and also at that convention in Memphis the President announced that he would call a meeting of all the Governors of all States at an early date to be held in Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formally discussing the conservation of our natural resources.

It is clear that our streams should be considered and conserved as great natural resources.

At the close of the introduction, the convention recognized to a man that there stood before it one of the sincere friends not only of conservation, in general, but waterway improvement in particular, and Mr. Pinchot was given a demonstration which will never be remembered.

Tennessee, at which enterprising city there had gathered together the greatest and largest body of waterway enthusiasts that this country has ever seen, and I might say in passing, that it was through the untiring efforts of Mr. Pinchot that President Roosevelt consented to make the journey down the Father of Waters; and also at that convention in Memphis the President announced that he would call a meeting of all the Governors of all States at an early date to be held in Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formally discussing the conservation of our natural resources.

It is clear that our streams should be considered and conserved as great natural resources.

At this conference every Governor of every State in the Union, except one or two, was present. They organized, and while keeping in the background to a certain extent, still Mr. Pinchot's guiding hand could be seen throughout the entire conference.

Following the important meeting referred to above of the Governors, at the White House in May, 1906, a grand convention of five thousand delegates of the Lakes-to-the-Sea Deep Waterways Association was held at the Auditorium in Chicago, October 7, 8 and 9, 1906, at which time the two Presidential candidates—William Howard Taft and William Jennings Bryan—addressed the convention, committing themselves to the project, and committing their respective parties to the improvement of our national waterway system.

There, however, appeared on the program of the Chicago convention this announcement:

"Address by Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the Chairman of the National Conservation Commission, on 'Waterways and the Conservation Movement.'"

It was the great pleasure and privilege of the writer of this article to introduce Mr. Pinchot to that great gathering of waterway enthusiasts in the following language:

"Ten years ago a descendant of a Revolutionary family on one side, and of a distinguished French lineage on the other, the son of our foremost pioneer in forest preservation, was placed in charge of the forestry work of the Federal government. Displaying remarkable zeal and energy he extended the work so effectively that today over 160,000,000 acres of our national forests have been placed under his administrative control.

Leading Waterways Advocate.
In connection with this forestry work he has become one of our leading advocates of a wise and vigorous waterway policy; through his position as Chief Forester of the United States, and as a member of the Inland Waterways Commission he has been credited by the President of the United States with having done more than any other man for the development of the recent policy of conserving our natural resources, and he is now chairman of the National Conservation Commission. Mr. Gifford Pinchot."

At the close of the introduction, the convention recognized to a man that there stood before it one of the sincere friends not only of conservation, in general, but waterway improvement in particular, and Mr. Pinchot was given a demonstration which will never be remembered.

Taft down the Mississippi river from St. Louis to New Orleans, and made an address at the New Orleans convention upon the subject of "Conservation of Rivers and Forests."

A Good Man for Senator.
It must now be apparent to everyone that Mr. Pinchot not only took a prominent part in the origination of the conservation movement, but that he has been the one loyal friend of rivers and harbors in this country and strongly favors their immediate development and utilization.

If elected to the United States Senate from Pennsylvania that State will have one man who will be loyal to his pledges and platform, and the United States will claim in him a friend at the National Capitol; and I desire to make the prophecy that the tremendous work and sacrifices on the part of Mr. Pinchot in the interests of this whole country will be rewarded, and that his friends throughout Pennsylvania will rally to his standard, and if elected the people will have one man in Congress that they can depend upon morning, noon and night to work for the conservation movement and the improvement of our rivers and harbors as a national necessity.

Party Frocks for Little Girls

These three simple dresses pictured here, worn by little maids from six to nine years old, set forth the most approved lines on which frocks for children are made. They are of fabrics most in demand for occasional wear. They are made in the same design as the simple clothes for daily wear, but show more latitude in the matter of decoration.

At the left of the picture the little miss is arranged in a party frock of mesaline. It could hardly be more simply cut if it were a gingham school dress. It is a plain slip with parallel tucks running lengthwise at the front and back. They, with the shaping of the underarm seams, provide the fullness of the skirt. At the bottom of the tucks small roses of velvet ribbon are used as a finishing touch. The neck and sleeves are ornamented with an applique of heavy lace.

At the right a plain close-fitting slip fastens at the left side. It is made of a figured crepe, in white, finished with a sailor collar and bow in black satin and a dash of black satin ribbon. The sleeves are very short and ornamented with four narrow tucks at the bottom and finished with a piping of black satin. The fastening is managed with small crocheted buttons and buttonholes above the waist line. Below this the hem in the material is stitched down. Very long black stockings and low slippers with straps are worn with this somewhat abbreviated garment. A little greater length and amplitude would improve the skirt.

Five plain organdies or dimity of the best grades in lawn are suited to the dress shown in the middle of the picture. It is also a one-piece slip, with the fullness provided for by deep plaits laid over the shoulders in the back and front. The skirt is bordered with a wide band at the bottom, of printed organdie, showing plain and figured stripes alternating. The sleeves are finished with one plain and one figured stripe of the same material. The figures appearing in the border are calculated to captivate the childish fancy. Conventional figures, like snow crystals and much conventionalized little dogs and birds interspersed among them characterize this bit of decoration, only suited to a young child. The sleeves in this dress are elbow length. The neck is finished with a band of the figured fabric. A round collar of princess lace forms the finishing touch for this little dress. Half-length socks and low canvas shoes are worn with this as with almost all other summer dresses.

In adapting these designs to American children they are improved by cutting them knee-length and allowing slightly more fullness at the bottom of the skirt.

PENROSE MACHINE STILL IN POWER

This is Shown by the Platform of State Republicans

LOCAL OPTION ISSUE IGNORED

Statements of Declaration Criticized by A. Nevin Detrich, Chairman of the Washington Party State Committee—Asks Where Dr. Brumbaugh Stands on Local Option.

(By International News Service.) Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—The Republican platform just adopted shows that the Penrose organization is still dominated by the liquor interests and that it is going into the campaign along the same old lines to fool the people, declared A. Nevin Detrich, Washington party state chairman, yesterday.

"They ignored local option," declared Detrich, "because Penrose and Brumbaugh are going to get a large amount of their campaign funds and support from the liquor interests."

"They never mentioned the scandalous pledge breaking of 1910 and 1912 when they promised the workmen of this state a workmen's compensation law and then defeated that law at the instance of the big corporations. They are again trying to fool labor with the same old discredited promises and pledges."

"They never mentioned the vicious fight conducted by Penrose and the rest of the gang on the child labor bills which they defeated in the legislature of 1911 and 1913."

"They have again uttered a promise for remedial legislation for the children of this state which they have broken repeatedly in the last few years."

"What shall we say of a platform in the drafting of which Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol, the textile boss who defeated the last child labor bill, had a prominent part?"

"The 'scandalous effrontery' of Penrose and his gang was never shown to better advantage than when the Grundies were called in to help draft a platform which cynically speaks of the party's promises for decent labor legislation."

"The platform speaks of good roads. The notorious and scandalous record of the present state administration, dominated by Penrose, where the highway department has been made a political machine and millions of dollars have been spent, leaving the roads in worse condition than they found them, is the answer."

"They talk of equalization of taxes. Ever since the Penrose machine has dominated that state the corporations have been favored and the average home owner and the farmer have been forced to pay $6 where the corporation pays $1 in taxes."

"They say the state is out of debt. They lie! The state owes millions in unpaid obligations to the townships of the state for road improvements; it owes millions to the schools because of inadequate appropriations to schools; it owes millions to the eleemosynary institutions of the state because of politically juggled appropriations. Out of debt, indeed! Pennsylvania's revenues should be doubled and would be but for the fact that corporation control of the governing machine of the state has permitted revenue producers to escape proper taxation; because it has permitted a capital to be furnished and a Rittersville hospital to be built. Real estate would not be paying six times the tax of corporate and personal property but for the rule of the machine which Penrose and his creatures pray to continue.

"Then there is Brumbaugh. This apostle of local option hobnobbing with Penrose on the same platform and blatantly yelling for the success of a party which has refused to put local option on its platform!"

"Does Brumbaugh stand for local option? Then if he cannot force local option into the Republican platform before his election, what influence will he have on the Republican leaders in the event that he is elected?"

"He will be the same old kind of 'safe' governor, if elected, that has been the disgrace of Pennsylvania. He will stand for the gang."

"I now repeat my question to Dr. Brumbaugh that I asked a few weeks ago."

"Does Dr. Brumbaugh profess the same principles as his backers, Penrose, the liquor interests, the Grundies and other special privilege seekers."

"What a sight for the people of this state! Brumbaugh saying he is for local option, and Penrose and the liquor interests refusing to put such a plank in their platform."

"Brumbaugh has swallowed the whole Penrose platform liquor, special interests, political grafting and all."

COMMITTEE IS GRATEFUL FOR COURTESIES SHOWN

We, as committee on arrangements for a picnic, held by H. B. Powell's Sunday school class at Mineral Springs park August 25, wish to thank and congratulate the ladies of Woodland for the very fine supper furnished and for the courteous treatment received from them, and we hope to reciprocate next year. We also wish to correct our first scribble in that it was the ladies of the U. B. church, with the assistance of some of the ladies of the M. E. church, instead of the ladies of the M. We also wish to congratulate the management of the park for the wonderful effort put forth to make the Mineral Springs park an ideal place for gatherings of this kind and one of the best and most convenient places in this part of the state, and we thank D. Vast American Industries.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. PICNICKERS HAVE PLEASANT TIME

Despite the Rain They Enjoy Themselves in Clearfield

A special train of thirteen cars brought about 1,000 New York Central shoppers, their wives and children from Jersey Shore for the picnic here today. The visitors were met at the station by Burgess Colahan and several citizens, and all the trucks and automobiles available were pressed into service to convey them and their families from the station to the central part of town.

The visitors were accompanied by the Avis Shop band and the Jersey Shore Chorus band, both of which played excellent music in the street. All the club rooms, the arbitration room in the court house, No. 1 fire house, the opera house, the large rooms, council chamber and the ball room in the Danmeling were placed at their disposal. A dance will be held in the Danmeling by the picnickers this evening.

The rain prevented the visiting from going to the park this morning, and the citizens decided to make their stay in Clearfield as pleasant as possible, and the picnickers were very grateful to Burgess Colahan and those officials and others who opened their buildings that the busy people might have places to which to take of their lunch.

It was an orderly crowd, and the people of Clearfield regret that the wet weather spoiled to some extent the pleasure of the day, but hope that the Avis shoppers will return next year, when conditions will be more to their liking.

The committee of the whole, which had charge of the picnic, wishes to express, through the columns of the Progress, the thanks of the visitors for the courtesies extended to them during their stay in Clearfield. The committee especially desires to thank the members of the lodges, the officials of the court house, the firemen, the manager of the opera house and others for throwing open their buildings and rooms for the accommodation of the picnickers, who were prevented from going to the Driving park by the rain.

Rather a Most Rebutal.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the hospital," announced the Rev. Dr. Pausley at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution. They are in duty bound to help their brother brethren."

UNDERESTIMATES UNITED STATES

Answer to the Statements of General von Edelsheim

AMERICAN OFFICERS LAUGH

If Germany Were to Undertake the Task of Overcoming the United States She Would Find a Well Equipped Army of Regular Troops and a Half a Million Trained Men Ready to Meet Her.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 29.—The Prussian general staff greatly underestimates the military prowess of the United States, judging from the remarks of General von Edelsheim in his memorandum on the feasibility of an invasion of America. This was the opinion of naval and military officers interviewed here today. They were slightly amused at some of von Edelsheim's ideas.

It was even suggested that some of these errors were so gross as to lead to the doubt that any member of the Prussian general staff could have been guilty of them.

According to the printed accounts, General von Edelsheim declared: "At present the regular army of the United States amounts to 65,000 men, of whom about 20,000 could be disposed of."

As a matter of fact there are 85,000 men in the American army, of whom, outside of contingents in the Philippines, Hawaii, China, Porto Rico, the canal zone and the coast defenses, about 40,000 men, according to an estimate made today, could be put into the field. The size of the American army can be found in any annual report of the secretary of war.

Army officers were especially inclined to laugh over the Prussian general's idea that our forces "at least 10,000 are needed for watching the Indian territory." The American officers said, had it been necessary to hold this territory, the United States would undoubtedly have been able to do so with a much smaller force.

"Lastly," von Edelsheim is quoted as saying, "the militia is not efficient; it is partly armed with muzzle-loaders, and its training is worse than its armament." The American national guardsmen are not armed with muzzle-loaders. They are armed with Springfield rifles of 1904. They are in this paper.

GERMANS CONTINUE FIGHTING FIERCELY

AS IN A GIGANTIC VICE ALLIES ARE BEING SQUEEZED BY FOES

FEARFUL ARTILLERY DUEL IN VOSGES

Conceded in Paris That the Final "Show-Down" Will Occur in the Valley of the Somme, North of Paris—Kaiser's Troops, Fresh from their Conquest on the Meuse, Have Swept Forward by Boulders—French in Belgium Have Driven the Germans Back to Chimay, 55 Miles South of Brussels and Six Miles From the French Frontier—Prisoners Taken by French Say the German Army is Suffering a Shortage of Food, Their Communication With the Commissary Having Been Broken in Several Places.

(By International News Service)

Paris, Aug. 29.—Like a titanic vice the Germans are squeezing the allies, with the French right and left wings being steadily forced back toward Paris.

It is admitted that the left wing has been withdrawn from the Belgian frontier to the Somme river, in the department of Somme, of which Amiens is the capital, 70 miles from Paris.

Sweep Forward by Boulders.

The invaders, following the great conquest on the Meuse, have swept forward by boulders. Though the French right wing is unceasingly engaged in a fearful artillery struggle in the Vosges it is conceded that the final "show-down" will occur in the valley of the Somme, north of Paris. The French are preparing to "dig or die."

German Shortage of Food.

German prisoners reveal the fact that the invaders are suffering a food shortage, due to breaks in the line of communication in several places.

Drove Germans Back.

London, Aug. 29.—Dispatches, undated, relate that the British, after great resistance, drove the Germans back to Chimay, Belgium.

Chimay is 55 miles south of Brussels and six miles from the French frontier.

Declares it a Horrible War.

Paris, Aug. 29.—The following communique was issued by the minister of war last night.

"The situation of our front from the department of the Somme to the Vosges remained today what it was yesterday. The German forces appear to have slowed up their march.

All captured German officers say it is a horrible war and that the German losses are enormous. Out of two regiments—the One Hundred and Twelfth and One Hundred and Forty-second infantry—only 60 men were left after one engagement. All reports indicate the tremendous heavy results have been of unprecedented proportions.

Carnage Unprecedented.

Official reports of the situation yesterday were considered satisfactory showing the strategy of the allies, which, on the whole, has been directed toward stopping the rush of German masses of troops across the northern frontier and thus preventing the return of the chief mass of the German forces to cope with the advancing five Russian armies which are now penetrating Germany via East Prussia.

That this policy is succeeding is partly proved by the carnage which was registered in official announcements yesterday morning. This stated (Continued on Page Eight)

British Defeat Germans in North Sea Fight

London, Aug. 29.—The British fleet has been victorious in the North Sea. While the war office has developed the whereabouts of the principal fleet in mystery ever since hostilities opened, last night it announced that the main division had sunk two German cruisers and two German torpedo boats destroyers off Heligoland. A third cruiser was left afloat and sinking. Heligoland commands the mouth of the Elbe river and is a position of

It is an international law but an unwritten one, that a sovereign cannot lawfully require a subject to serve as a spy, except in a singular case, and that of the last importance. This Well-Known Firm of Merchants Will Erect the Station on Top of Their Newly Improved Building—War and Other Important News Will be Given to the Public Daily.

Clearfield is to have a wireless station. This information is given to the public for the first time by the Progress. There are other towns in this section which have wireless telegraphic stations, and there was no good reason why Clearfield should not have this modern means of communicating with the outside world.

The enterprising mercantile firm of Leitzinger Brothers, which has just completed its large addition to the building on Market street, near Third, has let the contract for the erection of a wireless station of the roof of the building. Work on the erection of the necessary wires and apparatus will begin next week, and it will be but a short time before the station will be sending and receiving messages from all parts of the civilized world.

An expert operator will be in charge of the station until Leitzinger Brothers can find a suitable man to take charge and do the work. The station will be equipped with the latest and best apparatus, and it will be possible to receive the latest war news, baseball scores, general news of the world and to keep in touch with the outside world in other respects.

ST. PETERSBURG TELLS DIFFERENT STORY

Says the Russians Swept the Prussians Before Them and Are Not Far From Lemberg, the Fall of Which is Imminent—March Towards Berlin Goes On, the Germans Falling Back on Koenigsburg, 310 Miles From the German Capital—Great Battle in Progress on the Sorth River, Three Austrian Army Corps Being Engaged Against the Russians.

(By International News Service)

Berlin, Aug. 29.—The war office announces that five Russian corps, 200,000, were defeated at Allenstein, East Prussia.

This is the first important "Russian" news received here.

A Contrary Report.

London, Aug. 29.—The Russian embassy here last night received advices from St. Petersburg to the effect that the Russians had occupied Allenstein, East Prussia, sixty-five miles south of Koenigsburg, after repulsing the Germans, who had brought up the reinforcements.

In Galicia, the advices said, the Russian advance continued and an Austrian regiment had been decimated.

Great Battle in Progress.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 29.—The Russian army of invasion has penetrated Austrian Galicia and is within 20 miles of Lemberg, the capital. The fall of Lemberg is imminent.

Movement on Berlin Goes On.

Lemberg lies about 280 miles from Budapest, the capital of Hungary, and Budapest is about 200 miles from Vienna. While the Russian army must cross the Carpathian mountains before it can begin its principal demonstration against the capital of Francis Joseph's empire, the successes so far point to a continuation of the advance.

The movement toward Berlin goes on. The Germans have fallen back on Koenigsburg and the Russians under General Rennenkampf have occupied Tilsit. Koenigsburg is 310 miles from Berlin.

German Lose Heavily.

Washington, Aug. 29.—London cables its embassy here "East Prussia is overrun by the Russians and a great part is in Russian hands."

The German forces, three corps and divisions, were repeatedly defeated, losing heavily in men and guns.

Russians Take Koenigsburg.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—The Russians are reported to have taken Koenigsburg in East Prussia, but this report is unconfirmed.

The Austrians are fighting desperately, endeavoring to turn back the Russian advance in the zone around Lemberg.

CLEARFIELD MAY HAVE A BIG QUILT FACTORY

The quilts which are on exhibition this afternoon and evening in Leitzinger Brothers' windows were made by hand by Mrs. Banta, of Walnut street, who recently moved to Clearfield from Ligonier, Indiana. Mrs. Banta has made quilts and sold them by mail orders for a number of years. She is hoping to work up the industry here so that she will employ 35 or 40 women to assist her in the sewing. The quilts are made of the best material and the quilting done in pretty patterns, thousands of tiny stitches being put into each one.

Mrs. Banta has sold quilts to the Actors, the Rothchilds, the Rosenbergs and many other wealthy people of the United States. She has a quilt made by her in every state, in the union. Those on exhibit in Leitzinger's windows will be sent to customers in Philadelphia on Monday.

THE FIRST FLOWER SHOW A SUCCESS

Young Girls Show That They Can Be as Patriotic as

BEAUTIFUL ALBINO ROSES

Prizes Awarded by the State Club Were Won by Young Girls of the Clearfield High School. The first prize was won by Miss Grace Underwood, who had in her collection ten different kinds of flowers.

The children who had flowers in the exhibit are: Mildred Shaw, Edna Straw, Edna Schickling, Grace Underwood, Vida Wallace, Genevieve Moore, Nedra Wallace, Celia Bonnell, Maudie Salsaf, Vida McLaughlin, Lena O'Brien, Myra Bell, Chester McKee, Elizabeth Mitchell and Mable Henry.

The flowers were all given from seed by the children themselves and prizes were awarded to those who had succeeded in obtaining the largest and most perfect exhibition of flowers. The first prize of $10 was awarded to Miss Grace Underwood, who had in her collection ten different kinds of flowers.

Ay's Cherry-cream was the prize of $5. The second prize of $2.50 was awarded to Mabel White and Lena O'Brien and the five prizes of $1 each were given to Edna Schickling, Edna Straw, Myra Bell, Chester McKee, Elizabeth Mitchell and Mable Henry.

The show was a grand success for the first of its kind to be attempted in Clearfield, and the Washington party is to be complimented upon the success of the occasion. HEAVY FREIGHT TRAFFIC ON ALL THE RAILROADS

Probably the heaviest freight of the season was that loaded over the Pennsylvania railroad last week. The amount of the western crops shipped east and this was responsible for the big increase in the freight rate. Just how long the boom will last, no one knows, but they are not too sure that it will be a permanent one.

There are a lot of chances to make money last week for the first time this season. Look at the crops shipped east. The regular crops were shipped in the fall.

Thousands of bushels of wheat are being shipped east. A large number of the cars in the freight yards at Altoona and other places being sent to the east.

to shape to handle the heavy traffic that is expected while the harvest season continues.

May Ask Rehearing.

There has been some talk in railway circles for the past two weeks that the managers of the eastern railroads in official classification territory may ask the interstate commerce commission to reopen the freight rate case in which the commission handed down an adverse opinion on August 1. In its decision, the commission granted some relief to the carriers west of Baltimore and Pittsburgh, but denied the application of the carriers operating east of those points. Railroad men contend that conditions have changed materially since that time, and that the commission need have no qualms in reversing itself. The decrease in shipping has materially affected the export and import of the carriers and the gross earnings are lagging behind.

Experiments with the new design of cabin will be carried out over the division and in the meantime for the benefit of officials. A feature of the new design is the two trucks and the greater length by two feet than the ordinary wood cabin. Ample room is provided for the train crew.

About two weeks ago the suggestion was made that the railroads should ask congress for relief in the form of some legislation which would enable the carriers to advance rates.

New Type of Caboose.

Within the next week, the first all-steel cabin car to be constructed for the Pennsylvania railroad will be turned out of the shops in Altoona, Pa., and will be put into test trains in the Pittsburgh division for a series of experiments. The caboose is of the type known as N-5 class and will represent the safety-first idea carried out by the Pennsylvania in the construction of its equipment.

day, with black vestments and white cravats. True to the traditions of the sex, the women are busy arranging their veils in order that they shall appear to the best advantage when they enter the audience chamber. At this time remains, the footmen here and there urge the diletto-spectator-hurry.

"The chamber itself is of enormous proportions and is decorated in a manner befitting the use to which it is devoted. It is hung in figured red silk, and rich paintings are on the walls. At the end of the room, nearest the entrance is the papal throne, set on a low platform, but the pope only occupies it at private audiences.

"Quickly the seats around the stage are filled, and late comers manage to squeeze into corners. Perhaps 150 persons are in the room when a group of nuns appears, and they find places in the space between the throne and the doorway.

"By the time the seats are filled there are some furtive whisperings, which cease abruptly when the footmen appear at the entrance. One of them raises his hand, and every one rises. Then enter three cardinals in their scarlet robes, and after them comes the holy father. He wears a white cassock with a silver girdle, and on his head is a skullcap of the same material as the cassock.

"Accompanying the pontiff and the cardinals are several officers of the papal guards in military uniforms of dark blue. Remarkably handsome men they are.

Nuns First to Be Greeted.

"First to receive the holy father's greetings are the nuns, who have come to present a memorial or petition. They kneel, and the pope offers to each his hand, on the third finger of which is the ring of St. Peter—a huge square emerald surrounded by diamonds. After all the nuns have kissed the ring they rise, and for several minutes the spokeswoman and the holy father carry on a conversation. The memorial is received and given to one of the cardinals, and the pope begins a circuit of the room.

"As he advances one of the footmen motions to the visitors nearest him and ten or fifteen kneel and salute the ring as it is presented to each in turn. Some of the visitors are on both knees, others on but one.

"All the visitors kneel, so they rise ten or fifteen at a time, until the holy father having completed the tour of the room, he pauses near the door to bestow his blessing, when every one kneels again. In clear, distinct tones the spokesman asks the blessing of God on all present and on all those who have asked the visitors to invoke a blessing. Then, with uplifted hands, he pronounces the benediction in Latin and, followed by the members of his suit, leaves the room.

Thirteen No Hoodoo to Him.

Police-Sergeant John Figg, in acknowledging a presentation from his comrades to the Dover (Del.) police force on his retirement, denied that misfortune attended the number 13. He said he was one of a family of 13; he started work at thirteen; was 13 years in his first employment; joined the Dover police on April 13, when he was twelve-thirteen years old; and his family numbered 13.

Possible of Application.

An old woman was walking through a forest when he saw a large bear approaching him. Realizing his predicament, he exclaimed: "Oh Lord, be with me!" Still the bear came on, when the man again prayed: "Oh Lord, be on my side." Seeing the bear continue to approach, the woodsman, whipping out his knife, exclaimed: "Oh Lord, if you won't be on my side, just declare neutrality, and I'll show you the gold-dardest bear fight you ever saw in your life."

How Indians Sleep Warm.

The Indian, according to a writer about camp life, resorts to two methods to keep warm while asleep. If it is not unduly cold, he lights a rather large fire and warms the earth, then rakes away the coals, lies down and pulls his blanket over him. In colder weather, besides this, he heats a big boulder, covers it lightly with earth, and curls himself around it. He never wraps himself in the blanket, but uses it exclusively as a covering.

Put It on the Other Fellow.

"We should so live," remarked the man on the car, "that the other fellow will be to blame if anything goes wrong."

In terror he rushes to the bedroom raving. While he is hugging while another question is played on him. He suddenly realizes that he is hugging a woman's back. It does not take him long to discover all strong drink and later he proves that his oath was a sorry one.

The Barnstormers.

At the opera house this evening. A dramatic company, stranded in a small town, once a large bill at the hotel. The hotelkeeper's son has been strongly attracted by the members of the company, and they plan to use this fact to their advantage. They offer the boy's parents to take him into their company as an actor if the father will finance them to the next town and cancel their hotel bill. The simple parents are delighted at their proposition. In the next town they have poor success and a great many difficulties. Billie goes in and the hotelkeeper, now bar-office man, is broke. The trunks of the company are attached. The old man at last realizes that he is in bad. He breaks with the company, and having no funds wires home to his wife for money to return.

He receives an answer, telling him and his son that they can walk. They accordingly turn their backs upon their late failure and homeward round their weary way.

When Schultz comes to himself, he goes to his mother, who is in the hospital, and she tells him that his mother is in the hospital and is looking for him. Jack goes to her home and finds her in the hospital.

AN AUDIENCE AT THE VATICAN

New Pope Pius X. Received Pilgrims in Rome.

INSTRUCTIONS AS TO DRESS

Black For Both Men and Women, Men Appearing in Evening Dress and Women Without Gloves—Entrance of the Holy Father Impressive—Kissing the Ring of St. Peter.

The New York Post publishes the following interesting account of an audience with the late Pope Pius X. at the Vatican in Rome:

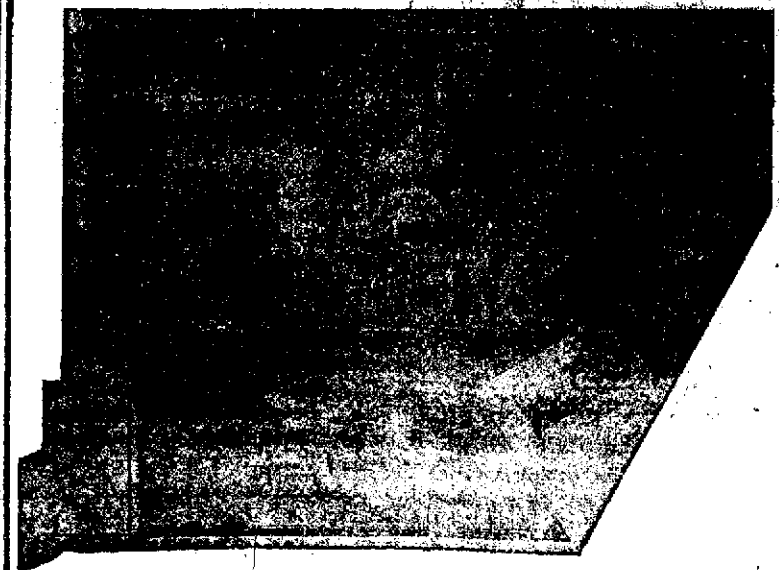

"The 'permea' (permea) which has been obtained after so much effort in the Vatican, partly printed, partly written. It states that his holiness will be pleased to receive in audience at such and such a day and hour Signor Bianco and four others. At the bottom of the page are instructions as to the dress to be worn. Gentlemen are to appear in black clothing, with white cravats. Ladies are to wear black, with black veils. Monsignori and priests are required to wear the garb usual to their ecclesiastical rank. Significant is the warning that under no circumstances will visitors be allowed to present photographs to his holiness. Inquiry brings the information that the ladies are to arrange the veils as a headpiece and not to cover the face and that they are to appear gloveless.

"The time for the audience having arrived, visitors who come to the Vatican on foot must again pass the barrier of the Swiss guards and once more ascend the long stairway. This time, though, they are directed to cross an immense paved court in which are many carriages that have entered the grounds through a gate at an elevation somewhere in the rear. Across the court and up another magnificent flight of marble steps is the audience chamber, to which scores are now winding their way.

The Papal Throne.

ANTWERP VITAL STRATEGIC POINT

W. Captured Germany Could
Cripple British Commerce.

IS BELGIUM'S BEST DEFENSE

Napoleon Called the City "the Loaded Pistol at the Heart of England"—It is Almost as Important to That Country as One of Her Own Ports at the Mouth of the Thames.

Military men see in the German advance on Antwerp an attempt to seize that port in the interest of the German North sea fleet.

The ships of the main German squadron are believed to be in the mouth of the Elbe, close to the entrance to the Kiel canal. The fortifications of Heligoland and on either side of the Elbe ensure the Elbe anchorage safe from attack. These fortifications are believed to be impregnable to ship attack.

The possession of Antwerp and Ghent would put the Germans in position to direct torpedo boat attacks against the mouth of the Thames and against Sheerness and other east coast of England ports.

The distance from Flushing at the Scheldt mouth is so short that torpedo boats could make forays on English ports, and if undamaged could regain port before daylight.

With the advance of the German army into Belgium and a possibility of attack on Antwerp in view, military men early perceived one of the most urgent reasons for England dispatching a large force to the continent. Antwerp is regarded as of almost as much importance to England as one of her own ports at the Thames mouth.

Menace to Holland.
The taking of Antwerp and the utilization of the Scheldt for effective operations against England may spell trouble with Holland, says the New York Herald, but if Germany can pass her torpedo boats down the Rhine into the Scheldt it may mean that she can find a sea outlet west of the Scheldt, either from Belgium or France. The entire Belgian and north French country is a network of canals, and the extent of the tonnage handled on these inland waterways is hardly understood by those who have not actually traversed them. It is a fact that torpedo boats can pass from the Mediterranean to the English channel without going outside, and torpedo boats are built in the interior of France and transported to the north and south by waterways. All the heavy artillery built at the Creu-

sot works in central France is sent forward to the artillery shops of the same company at Havre by water.

To Germany the possession of the north Belgian and north French coast means greater striking power at England. It means bringing forward the numerous torpedo boat destroyers and submarines held in leash in the Elbe and at Wilhelmshaven, and it may mean that after all is said and done it is England that Germany is aiming at even more than France in this great struggle.

Antwerp Hard to Capture.

The defenses of Antwerp, to which city the king of the Belgians removed his capital, are the strongest in Belgium. They were designed as the strategic center of the national defense of the country and are supposed to form an entrenched camp for 100,000 men.

The length of the enceinte is about nine miles. The scheme included detached forts, those which are on the side not defended by foundation being about a mile and a quarter apart and from two to three miles in front of the enceinte. They are powerful works for a garrison of about 1,000 men and are intended for an armament of 120 guns and fifteen mortars.

Although the system of defenses was adopted in 1850, the present fortifications were started in 1878, when it was recognized that the old ones had become useless on account of the increased range of artillery and the more destructive power of explosives. It was then decided to change Antwerp from a fortress to a fortified position by constructing an outer line of forts and batteries at a distance varying from six to nine miles from the enceinte. This second line consists of fifteen forts, large and small.

Antwerp has long been regarded by the English as a port which must remain in friendly hands. Its position opposite the mouth of the Thames is too close to take chances. Napoleon seized this port in 1804 and undertook to construct a great naval depot there. He is said to have declared that he would make of Antwerp "a loaded pistol to hold at the heart of England."

Another Chance for Hubby.
Advertisement in a paper—not in the Billville district: "This is to notify my husband, who got mad and ran away without sayin' so much as a word, that if he returns home and signs a paper to quit his meanness and act sensible, like he ought to have been raised to, which he wasn't, about all that I can think of now will be forgiven, provided, as said before, that he is a changed man an' will quit raisin' Cain an' a-doin' of nothin'—Atlantic Constitution."

Hearing Heart Beats.
If you hear your heart beat in one ear, as many persons do, it is no proof of anything wrong with the heart. It is much more likely to be a local defect such as a chronic catarrh of the middle ear or stiffness and retraction of the drum. This is on the authority of a leading physician of Chicago.

GARDEN TRUCK FOR MARKET

Preparing Fruit and Vegetables is Most Important Operation—Uniformity Most Desired.

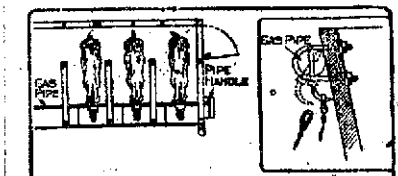

The most important operation in preparing fruit and vegetables for market is the grading. The work should be started in the field with the growing of crops. Careful cultivation means fewer culls and less expense for sorting and grading. Uniformity is the principal requirement to be considered in grading and packing. Growers should not attempt to handle and market their crops unless they pack them in uniform packages and grade them so that they will present a uniform quality, and general appearance. Produce put up in good shape will appear to the best advantage at the time of sale. Markets are seldom over supplied with good fruits and vegetables; it is the unevenly ripened, poorly developed, badly selected produce that injures the sale of the better products.

Produce of all kinds should be sorted so that in each package each specimen is as nearly like the others as is practicable. The efficient grader has in mind the appearance of the whole package, and not the individual specimens. This work can seldom be overdone, for the more rigid the grading the greater will be the profits at the time of sale.

UNHITCH ANIMALS IN HURRY

Device Installed in Barn at Pennsylvania Colliery Which Was Means of Saving Many Mules.

When a barn catches fire the matter of saving the horses and mules is a most serious problem. Rapidity of the blaze, the panic of the animals and the confusion make the release difficult, sometimes impossible, says Popular Mechanics. A device has been installed in the barn at a colliery in Pennsylvania which was the means of saving the lives of 43 mules in a recent fire. A wrought-iron gas pipe, 1½-inch in diameter, was passed through all the stalls, from one end of the barn to the other and supported on the front of the stalls. In each stall a seven-eighths-inch rod passes through the pipe, its lower end being bent to a hook with the point resting in a slight depression in the manger. The halter-strap ring is hooked over this. A quarter turn of a handle at either end of the pipe turns the hooks back and the rings drop off, releasing all the animals in the barn simultaneously.

TREAT HARD ALFALFA SEED

Unyielding Coats Prevent Them From Taking Up Water Readily, Delaying Germination.

In testing alfalfa seed for germination, it will be noticed that some seeds will not germinate, although they are healthy in appearance and not decayed at the end of the test. These are termed "hard seeds." They have unusually hard seed coats, which prevent them from taking up water readily. These seeds germinate readily when the seed coats are scratched. In former years it was thought that hard seeds in alfalfa and clover were as much inert matter. It is reasonable, however, to believe that many of the seeds become sufficiently scratched during seedling operations that they will grow at once, while others will grow later. Experimental work is being done along this line and it is hoped that soon the hard seeds in alfalfa will be found nearly as useful as the others. It is found that alfalfa seed from the various states differs greatly as to the percentage of hard seeds.

The Minnesota seed laboratory, in its enforcement of the new seed law, has made a regulation regarding the hard seeds in alfalfa and the clovers as follows: That, in placing the germination test on the label when seed is sold one-half the percentage of hard seed may be added to the percentage of seeds that germinated.

Noxious Discovery.
Another thing that interferes somewhat with a man's ambition to get even more than seventeen miles per gallon is the women folks' scientific discovery that gasoline, poured freely around the roots of the burdock plants along the back fence, will kill 'em deader than a door nail.—Ohio State Journal.

Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For
Aug. 30, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxii, 15-22.
Memory Verses, 16, 17—Golden Text,
Matt. xxii, 21—Commentary Prepared
by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson of questions by Pharisees and Herodians and Sadducees, feigning themselves just men, but seeking to entangle Him in His words and to deliver Him unto the power and authority of the governor, is found in Matthew, Mark and Luke (Matt. xii, 13; Luke xx, 20). His warning to the disciples to beware of the same three classes of people is found in Matt. xvi, 6; Mark viii, 15. The Pharisees were the most religious people of that day, but were more formalists. Everything was outward to obtain praise of men, nothing real before God. The Herodians, judging from Herod, could enjoy a good talk, but preserved the sinful pleasures of this world to things real and eternal. The Sadducees were religious, but had no use for things supernatural, angels or spirits, and did not believe in any resurrection. None of them had any use for Jesus Christ or His doctrine. Although they could not deny His wonderful works, His teaching was to them foolish and impractical and impossible. The light of His pure, holy life was too great a contrast to their selfish sinfulness.

Even Daniel's enemies had to confess that he was faithful and that there was neither error nor fault in him and that it would be impossible to find occasion against him unless in some way concerning the law of his God (Dan. vi, 4, 5).

These enemies of Christ were in a similar difficulty, but they would not come from their purpose. The Pharisees and Herodians unite in a scheme which they think will surely entangle Him and find occasion against Him. They come with flattering words concerning His being a teacher of truth and caring not for what people think or say of Him (verse 16). They proposed a question which it seems to them will bring from Him an amazing reply: "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not?" ("Shall we give, or shall we not give?" (verse 17, Mark xii, 13).

They probably thought that He would advise not to give to Caesar and thus find Him guilty of teaching against Caesar. They did not begin to know Him, nor that He could read their hearts, nor that they were dealing with one who knew what was in man (Jer. xvii, 10; John ii, 25). How scathing His reply, "Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?" How surprising His request, "Show me the tribute money," or as it is in Mark xii, 15, "Bring me a penny that I may see it." When they had brought it and in reply to His question told Him whose image it bore, then He saith unto them, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's" (verse 21). So they could not take hold of His words, marveled at His answer, bade their peace, left Him and went their way (verse 22; Luke xi, 20).

It was true on all occasions, "Never man spoke like this man." He Himself said, "The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself, but the Father that dwelleth in me He doeth the works." He gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should speak (John xiv, 10; xii, 49). If we were as fully yielded to Him as He was to the Father it would be true of us, "It is not we that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you" (Matt. x, 20). He was the image of the invisible God (II Cor. iv, 4; Heb. i, 3; Col. i, 15).

When we become His by redemption we begin to bear His image and should day by day be increasingly conformed to that image, for to that end all things are intended to work (Rom. viii, 28, 29). If we by faith behold His glory it will be so until when we see Him we shall be like Him (II Cor. iii, 18; I John iii, 1, 2). By creation they belonged to God, for He gave them life and breath and all things, but by choice they denied God in their works through professing to know Him (Tit. i, 16). God wants nothing from those who will not accept His mercy in Christ Jesus. He must first forgive us as sinners and give us Himself in Christ and make us His children before we can render Him anything, but when we become His our song should be "ever only for Thee." The words "went their way" (verse 22) remind us of the same in verse 5 and that all who are not with Christ in the way are still going their own way to everlasting destruction.

The same day came the Sadducees with their question about the seven brethren who, one after the other, had the same woman to wife. "If there be a resurrection, then whose wife shall she be of the seven?" (verses 23-28). Thus they thought they had shown the impossibility of a life after this one. Note His reply, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God" (verse 29). What a far-reaching, comprehensive word and in a sense applying to all error for it comes from not knowing the Scriptures. The way was a "see them" as to know are such, which makes us free indeed (John viii, 32-38).

O' Hearts

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever seen that you will never forget.

The Picture: The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., pronounced THE TREY O' HEARTS the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny You attend the movies—regularly. Instead of an ordinary film, you'll see graphically pictured by the best emotional actors and actresses in America—THE TREY O' HEARTS—a pace maker in pictures. So it won't cost you a nickel more to see it.

Mental Back Somersaults No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of THE TREY O' HEARTS one inch ahead of the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way.

Fall Reel Action in Every Foot The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., who are producing these films tell us that there is more action in every foot of THE TREY O' HEARTS than in a full reel of the ordinary scenario. And they should know. Thousands of scenarios go through their hands every year and they're investing $200,000 in putting THE TREY O' HEARTS on the screen. That's backing judgment. And their success in the moving picture business tells whether or not they know a good thing when they see it.

¶ "THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE" will be run in a liberal installment each day, and "THE TREY O' HEARTS" will appear on every Monday and Wednesday—Three full columns on each of these two days, and will also be run in pictures at the NEW OPERA HOUSE Wednesday Evening's.

ATHLETICS HAVE THE 1914

PENNANT WELL CINCHED

New York, Aug. 28.—The Athletics practically have clinched the American league pennant. The Boston Red Sox have a chance—just as much as a chance as a man has who chases a jack rabbit. The rabbit may bust a leg, or a couple of legs. The chances are that he won't.

With something like 33 games still to go the Athletics have a tremendous lead over the Sox. To win the Sox would have to grab off about 30 out of the next 33 games, even if the Athletics do no better than break even. But it's beyond the wildest imagination that both these little things should happen at the same time.

The Athletics have been ambling along all the way. They have not exerted themselves to the utmost. What's the use of tiring themselves out? To win the pennant with a lead of ten games will satisfy the Macklins just as much as would a 20-game lead.

In a week or two, when Connie Mack figures it out along his careful, conservative lines, that the Athletics have annexed the batting beyond a question of doubt, he'll proceed about the business of trying out some of his new pitchers. Connie has three youngsters who performed in fine style this year. But Connie must develop at least two more. Wonderful as they are, Bender and Plank cannot go on forever. Some day they must step down and out. And when they do Connie wants to have his pitching staff in such shape that the passing of the veterans will not jar the smoothness of his grand baseball machine.

Bender and Plank have gone along this year in amazing fashion. Plank, in his fourteenth year in the big league, is making a strong bid for the pitching leadership of the league. He has compiled a great record so far, and unless something unfortunate happens before the season is out, he will have a record that will stack up with the best achievements of his earliest years.

Bender hasn't worked with the frequency of yore, but every time he has taken his position on the firing line he has demonstrated that his brain has lost none of its cunning, and his whip none of its power. Bender cannot stand too much work. And he is the greatest "money pitcher" in baseball. Knowing these things, Connie is giving him long rests between games and thus grooming him for action in the World series combats.

The Athletics seem to be "pulling" for the Giants to win. They think they have the measure of the Giants and that if they have to back the New Yorkers it's a fairly safe bet that they'll repeat their triumphs of other years. But if they have to start up against the Braves, Cards, or Cubs, it casts a different aspect on things.

The Athletics know what sort of pitching to expect from the Giants—but they aren't familiar with the twists and turns used by the pitchers of the three other clubs. The Athletics pitchers knew the weaknesses of the Giants' pitchers but they don't know much about the pitchers of the other clubs.

If the Athletics had their way about it, the Giants would win the National League pennant.

SEATON'S CAREER AS TWIRLER NEAR CLOSE

Tom Seaton in action
New York, Aug. 28.—Tom Seaton is out of the game for good for the present season because of the failing of his pitching arm.

The Gentleman.
As a finished product, the gentleman seems to do everything very easily; but that ease like the ease of the habit, can only come by effort. He is socially secure; but whatever his station, he was not born so, for no man ever is socially secure by birth, even if he was born to be a king. The test of a gentleman is the pleasure others take in his society, and not in his wit or his virtue of his learning, but in his ordinary social relations with him. And this pleasure he cannot give merely by being on good terms with himself.

The Earth's Shadow.
The earth has a shadow, but very few ever see it, except in eclipses of the moon, or else few recognize it when they see it. Nevertheless, many of us have noticed it on fine, cloudless evenings in summer shortly before sunset, a rosy pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish gray segment under it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith and even passes it. This is the shadow of the earth.

Wise Precaution.
A certain politician desired a diplomatic appointment, says the Washington Star. A friend, in surprise, said to him: "But you don't even speak the language of the country?" "Well," replied the determined applicant, "a man isn't nearly so likely to make indiscreet remarks, if he has to get a lesson and look up the meaning of every word he utters."

As to Florida.
Many a man who is fooling away his time in the literary field might be useful in a potato field.

GOODYEAR TIRES SOLD AT BEFORE-WAR PRICES

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. announce "No war prices on Goodyear Tires." Mr. F. A. Stebbins, president of the company, thus explains their unique position.

"We advanced Goodyear prices, as others did theirs, when the rubber panic came. Almost to a day crude rubber rose in New York from 55 cents per pound to much over a dollar. And, as most of the world's rubber comes via London or Antwerp we saw no way out for a time.

"The New York supply was too small to consider. European exchange was entirely suspended. Merchant ships had ceased running.

"But we have an almost world-wide organization, and we brought it at once into play. We are the world's largest buyers of high-grade rubber, so we have our own experts in London, Colombo, Singapore and Para.

"We cabled our London people to buy the pick of the rubber there. By acting quickly and paying cash they obtained 1,500,000 pounds of the finest rubber there. They bought before the advance—before the other buyers saw a way to get London exchange or to bring the rubber here.

"That big supply of rubber is now nearly all on the way to the Goodyear factory in Akron. It constitutes the best of the London supply. On the inferior grades remaining, prices have since been rapidly advanced.

"We have since taken other steps to insure us a continuous supply, all of the highest grade rubber. In all the chief sources of rubber supply we have experts on the ground. All is being done that can be done to secure the best rubber, the exchange to pay for it and the ships to bring it here.

"The result is that Goodyear tire prices are now the same as in June. We are using the same grade of rubber and the same amount of it as we always have used in these tires.

"We are running our factory with three shifts of men, twenty-four hours a day. So long as we remain in this fortunate position on rubber, we shall supply tire users at before-war prices to the limit of our capacity."

Worth Knowing.
The laurel was much in favor in olden days, as it meant "love triumphs." The Greek bride wore a wreath of myrtle. A bride of today may choose her own flower if she wishes, stamping it with her individuality. Some girls take the flower allotted to the month, especially if the time happens to be June, with its wealth of roses. Widows usually wear violets, either white or purple, or a combination of both.

Spared Listeners and Himself.
For humor, combined with brevity, it would not be easy to rival the French cleric, who, on the festival of St. James, was called upon to pronounce a panegyric on the saint. "My brethren," he said, "twelve months ago I preached a eulogy on the eminent apostle whose festival you celebrate today. As I doubt not, you were all very attentive to me, and as I have not learned anything new of him, I have nothing to add to what I said at the time."

Smoke and Fire.
There can be no great smoke arise but there must be some fire.—Laf.

HOW PINCHOT LED IN BUILDING UP OUR WATERWAYS

EMINENT PENNSYLVANIAN SAW NECESSITY OF MAKING LAKE TO GULF SEAWAY A PRACTICAL ACCOMPLISHMENT

HIS STATESMANSHIP WON

W. K. Kavanaugh, Pioneer in Constructive Work, Tells of Pinchot's Ability and Energy and How He Labored to Help a Project that Meant Millions to the Farmers and the Merchants; Gives Pike County Man Credit for Big Achievement.

By W. K. KAVANAUGH
President, Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association.

Gifford Pinchot stands pre-eminent in the foreground of the great work of conservation in all its phases, which work has demanded national attention.

At the time he was Chief Forester of the United States, he saw with prophetic vision the great loss to timber resources, and it was perfectly natural that he should be among the first to realize the great importance and necessity for conservation of the public as well as private domain.

Certain it is that when I first met Mr. Pinchot, about 1906, being introduced to him by my friend, the late Dr. W. J. McGee, I at once saw in him a leader and a friend of my project, and I made up my mind that the organization which I then and still represent as its President, the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association, had at last found one man with honesty of purpose and who seemed with a comprehensive mind to grasp all the questions of conservation and was without question in favor of the improvement of our national waterways and harbors to the fullest extent.

As accepted today the question of conservation of our natural and national resources has been broadened, and not only includes forests, minerals, lands and water with all its uses, but also the conservation of human rights, of human welfare and of citizenship. These are recognized by the nation as real living issues.

Pinchot showed the way. While visiting the National Capital in 1906 it was suggested by Mr. Pinchot that a petition be prepared to be signed by western business organizations which called upon the President to appoint a Waterways Commission for the purpose of studying all questions relating indirectly or directly thereto. This petition was presented to President Roosevelt by Mr. Pinchot, and led to the appointment of the Inland Waterways Commission, and Mr. Pinchot was promptly made its chairman.

As a member of the Inland Waterways Commission he made a most comprehensive and exhaustive study of all the rivers and harbors of the United States, and was engaged in an inspection trip down the Mississippi from St. Paul to Memphis during a low water stage in October, 1907, when President Roosevelt started on that memorable trip from Keokuk to Memphis, Tennessee. Mr. Pinchot and his party joined the President at Keokuk and the greatest procession of western river steamers commenced their journey down the Mississippi river, for the first time giving the President of the United States an opportunity to study one of the nation's transportation and economic problems. He interested the President.

The objective point was Memphis, Tennessee, at which enterprising city there had gathered together the greatest and largest body of waterway enthusiasts that this country has ever seen, and I might say in passing, that it was through the untiring efforts of Mr. Pinchot that President Roosevelt condescended to make the journey down the Father of Waters; and also at that convention in Memphis the President announced that he would call a meeting of all the Governors of all States at an early date to be held in Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formally discussing the conservation of our natural resources.

History will record that this meeting was called and was held in Washington, D. C., May 13, 14 and 15, 1908, and anyone interested in the subject, may, by referring to the proceedings of the Conference of Governors, which was held in the White House at Washington, which book was published by authority of Congress, will find in the plan and origin of said conference that it was Mr. Pinchot, while Chief Forester, who had first given President Roosevelt his conservation ideas, and waterway advocates all over the United States were pleased when the President at that conference in his opening remarks said:

"It is clear that our streams should be considered and conserved as great natural resources."

Movement Gave Under Way.
At this conference every Governor of every State in the Union, except one or two, was present. They organized, and while keeping in the background to a certain extent, still Mr. Pinchot's guiding hand could be seen throughout the entire conference. This meeting will go down in history as one of Mr. Pinchot's greatest achievements.

Following the important meeting referred to above of the Governors, at the White House in May, 1908, a grand convention of five thousand delegates of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association was held at the Auditorium in Chicago, October 7, 8 and 9, 1908, at which time the two Presidential candidates—William Howard Taft and William Jennings Bryan—addressed the convention, committing themselves to the project, and committing their respective parties to the improvement of our national waterway system.

There, however, appeared on the program of the Chicago convention this announcement:

"Address by Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the Chairman of the National Conservation Commission, on 'Waterways and the Conservation Movement.'"

It was the great pleasure and privilege of the writer of this article to introduce Mr. Pinchot to that great gathering of waterway enthusiasts in the following language:

"Ten years ago a descendant of a Revolutionary family on one side, and of a distinguished French lineage on the other, the son of our foremost pioneer in forest preservation, was placed in charge of the forestry work of the Federal government. Displaying remarkable zeal and energy he extended the work so effectively that today over 160,000,000 acres of our national forests have been placed under his administrative control.

Leading Waterways Advocate.
In connection with this forestry work he has become one of our leading advocates of a wise and vigorous waterway policy; through his position as Chief Forester of the United States, and as a member of the Inland Waterways Commission he has been credited by the President of the United States with having done more than any other man for the development of the recent policy of conserving our natural resources, and he is now chairman of the National Conservation Commission. Mr. Gifford Pinchot."

At the close of the introduction, the convention recognized to a man that there stood before it one of the sincere friends not only of conservation, in general, but waterway improvement in particular, and Mr. Pinchot was given a demonstration which will never be remembered.

In November, 1908, Mr. Pinchot was again a prominent member of the party that accompanied President

Tennessee, at which enterprising city there had gathered together the greatest and largest body of waterway enthusiasts that this country has ever seen, and I might say in passing, that it was through the untiring efforts of Mr. Pinchot that President Roosevelt condescended to make the journey down the Father of Waters; and also at that convention in Memphis the President announced that he would call a meeting of all the Governors of all States at an early date to be held in Washington, D. C., for the purpose of formally discussing the conservation of our natural resources.

History will record that this meeting was called and was held in Washington, D. C., May 13, 14 and 15, 1908, and anyone interested in the subject, may, by referring to the proceedings of the Conference of Governors, which was held in the White House at Washington, which book was published by authority of Congress, will find in the plan and origin of said conference that it was Mr. Pinchot, while Chief Forester, who had first given President Roosevelt his conservation ideas, and waterway advocates all over the United States were pleased when the President at that conference in his opening remarks said:

"It is clear that our streams should be considered and conserved as great natural resources."

Movement Gave Under Way.
At this conference every Governor of every State in the Union, except one or two, was present. They organized, and while keeping in the background to a certain extent, still Mr. Pinchot's guiding hand could be seen throughout the entire conference. This meeting will go down in history as one of Mr. Pinchot's greatest achievements.

Following the important meeting referred to above of the Governors, at the White House in May, 1908, a grand convention of five thousand delegates of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association was held at the Auditorium in Chicago, October 7, 8 and 9, 1908, at which time the two Presidential candidates—William Howard Taft and William Jennings Bryan—addressed the convention, committing themselves to the project, and committing their respective parties to the improvement of our national waterway system.

There, however, appeared on the program of the Chicago convention this announcement:

"Address by Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the Chairman of the National Conservation Commission, on 'Waterways and the Conservation Movement.'"

It was the great pleasure and privilege of the writer of this article to introduce Mr. Pinchot to that great gathering of waterway enthusiasts in the following language:

"Ten years ago a descendant of a Revolutionary family on one side, and of a distinguished French lineage on the other, the son of our foremost pioneer in forest preservation, was placed in charge of the forestry work of the Federal government. Displaying remarkable zeal and energy he extended the work so effectively that today over 160,000,000 acres of our national forests have been placed under his administrative control.

Leading Waterways Advocate.
In connection with this forestry work he has become one of our leading advocates of a wise and vigorous waterway policy; through his position as Chief Forester of the United States, and as a member of the Inland Waterways Commission he has been credited by the President of the United States with having done more than any other man for the development of the recent policy of conserving our natural resources, and he is now chairman of the National Conservation Commission. Mr. Gifford Pinchot."

At the close of the introduction, the convention recognized to a man that there stood before it one of the sincere friends not only of conservation, in general, but waterway improvement in particular, and Mr. Pinchot was given a demonstration which will never be remembered.

In November, 1908, Mr. Pinchot was again a prominent member of the party that accompanied President

C., for the purpose of formally discussing the conservation of our natural resources.

Party Frocks for Little Girls

These three simple dresses pictured here, worn by little maids from six to nine years old, set forth the most approved lines on which frocks for children are made. They are of fabrics most in demand for occasional wear. They are made in the same design as the simple clothes for daily wear, but show more latitude in the matter of decoration.

At the left of the picture the little miss is arranged in a party frock of mesaline. It could hardly be more simply-out if it were a gingham school dress. It is a plain slip with parallel tucks running lengthwise at the front and back. They, with the shaping of the underarm seams, provide the fullness of the skirt. At the bottom of the tucks small roses of velvet ribbon are used as a finishing touch. The neck and sleeves are ornamented with an applique of heavy lace.

At the right a plain close-fitting slip fastens at the left side. It is made of a figured crepe, in white, finished with a sailor collar and bow in black satin and a dash of black satin ribbon. The sleeves are very short and ornamented with four narrow tucks at the bottom and finished with a piping of black satin. The fastening is managed with small crocheted buttons and buttonholes above the waist line. Below this the hem in the material is stitched down. Very long black stockings and low slippers with straps are worn with this somewhat abbreviated garment. A little greater length and amplitude would improve the skirt.

Five plain organdies or dimity of the best grades in lawn are suited to the dress shown in the middle of the picture. It is also a one-piece slip, with the fullness provided for by deep plaits laid over the shoulders in the back and front. The skirt is bordered with a wide band at the bottom, of printed organdie, showing plain and figured stripes alternating. The sleeves are finished with one plain and one figured stripe of the same material. The figures appearing in the border are calculated to captivate the childish fancy. Conventional figures, like snow crystals and much conventionalized little dogs and birds interspersed among them characterize this bit of decoration, only suited to a young child. The sleeves in this dress are elbow length. The neck is finished with a band of the figured fabric. A round collar of princess lace forms the finishing touch for this little dress. Half-length socks and low canvas shoes are worn with this as with almost all other summer dresses.

In adapting these designs to American children they are improved by cutting them knee-length and allowing slightly more fullness at the bottom of the skirt.

PENROSE MACHINE STILL IN POWER

This is Shown by the Platform of State Republicans

LOCAL OPTION ISSUE IGNORED

Statements of Declaration Criticized by A. Nevin Detrich, Chairman of the Washington Party State Committee—Asks Where Dr. Brumbaugh Stands on Local Option.

(By International News Service.) Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—The Republican platform just adopted shows that the Penrose organization is still dominated by the liquor interests and that it is going into the campaign along the same old lines to fool the people, declared A. Nevin Detrich, Washington party state chairman, yesterday.

"They ignored local option," declared Detrich, "because Penrose and Brumbaugh are going to get a large amount of their campaign funds and support from the liquor interests."

"They never mentioned the scandalous pledge breaking of 1910 and 1912 when they promised the workmen of this state a workmen's compensation law and then defeated that law at the instance of the big corporations. They are again trying to fool labor with the same old discredited promises and pledges."

"They never mentioned the vicious fight conducted by Penrose and the rest of the gang on the child labor bills which they defeated in the legislature of 1911 and 1913."

"They have again uttered a promise for remedial legislation for the children of this state which they have broken repeatedly in the last few years."

"What shall we say of a platform in the drafting of which Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol, the textile boss who defeated the last child labor bill, had a prominent part?"

"The 'scandalous effrontery' of Penrose and his gang was never shown to better advantage than when the Grundies were called in to help draft a platform which cynically speaks of the party's promises for decent labor legislation."

"The platform speaks of good roads. The notorious and scandalous record of the present state administration, dominated by Penrose, where the highway department has been made a political machine and millions of dollars have been spent, leaving the roads in worse condition than they found them, is the answer."

"They talk of equalization of taxes. Ever since the Penrose machine has dominated that state the corporations have been favored and the average home owner and the farmer have been forced to pay $6 where the corporation pays $1 in taxes."

"They say the state is out of debt. They lie! The state owes millions in unpaid obligations to the townships of the state for road improvements; it owes millions to the schools because of inadequate appropriations to schools; it owes millions to the eleemosynary institutions of the state because of politically juggled appropriations. Out of debt, indeed! Pennsylvania's revenues should be doubled and would be but for the fact that corporation control of the governing machine of the state has permitted revenue producers to escape proper taxation; because it has permitted a capital to be furnished and a Rittersville hospital to be built. Real estate would not be paying six times the tax of corporate and personal property but for the rule of the machine which Penrose and his creatures pray to continue.

"Then there is Brumbaugh. This apostle of local option hobnobbing with Penrose on the same platform and blatantly yelling for the success of a party which has refused to put local option on its platform!"

"Does Brumbaugh stand for local option? Then if he cannot force local option into the Republican platform before his election, what influence will he have on the Republican leaders in the event that he is elected?"

"He will be the same old kind of 'safe' governor, if elected, that has been the disgrace of Pennsylvania. He will stand for the gang."

"I now repeat my question to Dr. Brumbaugh that I asked a few weeks ago."

"Does Dr. Brumbaugh profess the same principles as his backers, Penrose, the liquor interests, the Grundies and other special privilege seekers."

"What a sight for the people of this state! Brumbaugh saying he is for local option, and Penrose and the liquor interests refusing to put such a plank in their platform."

"Brumbaugh has swallowed the whole Penrose platform liquor, special interests, political grafting and all."

COMMITTEE IS GRATEFUL FOR COURTESIES SHOWN

We, as committee on arrangements for a picnic, held by H. B. Powell's Sunday school class at Mineral Springs park August 25, wish to thank and congratulate the ladies of Woodland for the very fine supper furnished and for the courteous treatment received from them, and we hope to reciprocate next year. We also wish to correct our first scribble in that it was the ladies of the U. B. church, with the assistance of some of the ladies of the M. E. church, instead of the ladies of the M. E. church who finished this paper.

We also wish to congratulate the management of the park for the wonderful effort put forth to make the Mineral Springs park an ideal place for gatherings of this kind and one of the best and most convenient places in this part of the state, and we thank D. E. Young as manager or the courteous treatment he extends to every one.

Vast American Industries.

To remove rust spots on bathtubs and basins and discolorations in toilet basins and sinks apply muriatic acid with a mop. PICNICKERS HAVE PLEASANT TIME

Despite the Rain They Enjoy Themselves in Clearfield

A special train of thirteen cars brought about 1,000 New York Central shoppers, their wives and children from Jersey Shore for the picnic here today. The visitors were met at the station by Burgess Colahan and several citizens, and all the trucks and automobiles available were pressed into service to convey them and their families from the station to the central part of town.

The visitors were accompanied by the Avis Shop band and the Jersey Shore Chorus band, both of which played excellent music in the street. All the club rooms, the arbitration room in the court house, No. 1 fire house, the opera house, the large rooms, council chamber and the ball room in the Danmeling were placed at their disposal. A dance will be held in the Danmeling by the picnickers this evening.

The rain prevented the visiting from going to the park this morning, and the citizens decided to make their stay in Clearfield as pleasant as possible, and the picnickers were very grateful to Burgess Colahan and those officials and others who opened their buildings that the busy people might have places to which to take of their lunch.

It was an orderly crowd, and the people of Clearfield regret that the weather spoiled to some extent the pleasure of the day, but hope that the Avis shoppers will return next year, when conditions will be more to their liking.

The committee of the whole, which had charge of the picnic, wishes to express, through the columns of the Progress, the thanks of the visitors for the courtesies extended to them during their stay in Clearfield. The committee especially desires to thank the members of the lodges, the officials of the court house, the firemen, the manager of the opera house and others for throwing open their buildings and rooms for the accommodation of the picnickers, who were prevented from going to the Driving park by the rain.

Rather a Most Rebutal.

"We will now take up our annual collection for the benefit of the hospital," announced the Rev. Dr. Pausley at the close of his sermon, "and I hope those young men making so much noise all through this service will be especially liberal in their contribution. They are in duty bound to help their brother brethren."

UNDERESTIMATES UNITED STATES

Answer to the Statements of General von Edelsheim

AMERICAN OFFICERS LAUGH

If Germany Were to Undertake the Task of Overcoming the United States She Would Find a Well Equipped Army of Regular Troops and a Half a Million Trained Men Ready to Meet Her.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 29.—The Prussian general staff greatly underestimates the military prowess of the United States, judging from the remarks of General von Edelsheim in his memorandum on the feasibility of an invasion of America. This was the opinion of naval and military officers interviewed here today. They were slightly amused at some of von Edelsheim's ideas.

It was even suggested that some of these errors were so gross as to lead to the doubt that any member of the Prussian general staff could have been guilty of them.

According to the printed accounts, General von Edelsheim declared: "At present the regular army of the United States amounts to 65,000 men, of whom about 20,000 could be disposed of."

As a matter of fact there are 85,000 men in the American army, of whom, outside of contingents in the Philippines, Hawaii, China, Porto Rico, the canal zone and the coast defenses, about 40,000 men, according to an estimate made today, could be put into the field. The size of the American army can be found in any annual report of the secretary of war.

Army officers were especially inclined to laugh over the Prussian general's idea that our forces "at least 10,000 are needed for watching the Indian territory." The American officers said, had he heard that the Indians this last year had been the bravest of the nation, he would undoubtedly have been laughing at the Prussian general's idea.

"Lastly," von Edelsheim is quoted as saying, "the militia is not efficient; it is partly armed with muzzle-loaders, and its training is worse than its armament." The American national guardsmen are not armed with muzzle-loaders. They are armed with Springfield rifles of 1904. They are in this paper.
